Director of the Centre for the Study of Decision-Making Uncertainty, University College London

David Tuckett is the Director of UCL's Centre for the Study of Decision-making Uncertainty, supported by the Institute of New Economic Thinking and the Institute of Psychoanalysis in London.

Trained in Economics, Medical Sociology and Psychoanalysis he is Professor in the Faculty of Brain Sciences at UCL and a practicing psychoanalyst." His book Minding the Markets: An Emotional Finance View of Financial Instability opened new ways of thinking about Economics and Finance and (with Richard Taffler) he has also written a monograph published by the Research Foundation of the CFA Institute.

He has been developing a new approach to decision making under deep uncertainty termed Conviction Narrative Theory which is operationalised through Directed Algorithmic Text Analysis. The approach has made it possible to detect the kind of sentiment shifts associated with groupthink and so detect certain kinds of otherwise unforeseen risk.
